Two childhood friends, SMAJ and KRAS are doing their best to navigate their lives in the newly made state of Yugoslavia. They are struggling with the system while trying to let go of the past way of living and embrace the so-called progressive new style. The fifteen-year-old Kras gets recruited by state security service, known as the UDBA. The latter used the information about the boy's involvement in an accidental crime, to turn him into an informer. Because Kras and Smaj are good swimmers, they both get accepted to be part of Kosovo's first diving team. Kras is jealous, because while Smaj is living the good life and getting all the spotlight because of his ability to hold breath under water up to five minutes, Kras himself can never take a break, as he's always on duty. That's why very often when they call the team to recover a dead body from the waters, Kras gets away from the situation by calling in sick and letting Smaj recover the victims, which makes Smaj even more famous and Kras even more jealous. I'm not a bad guy, and I'm not a traitor. I'm never going to harm my fellow Albanians, but if they knew I collaborate they would hate me - thinks Kras. Still, by the end of the first season, the circumstances turn and make Kras spy on his friends and put them in jail.

STORY DEVELOPMENT IN SEASON TWO:

The second season takes place after Tito's death, at the dawn of Yugoslavia's economical downfall, quickly followed by political unrest. The main character in this season is SMAJ, who is now a family man. He is a hard-working man struggling to put food on the table. (In the 90s, Albanians employed by the government, representing a vast majority of the working class, were let go for political reasons.) He could always decide to accept payments for his diving missions, but he cannot break the promise just yet. At the same time life circumstances make KRAS turn into a government informer; everybody finds out that he's now a collaborator and he became a sworn enemy to Smaj.

CREATORS STATEMENT:

BLERTA ZEQIRI Ever since the end of the wars in Yugoslavia I constantly think about how can one be sure that is working for the good of humanity by affiliating to a political party and working for their agenda.

My grandfather was killed in a battle fighting the red army. During communism he was considered a traitor, today, he is considered a hero. So who was he really? Was he good or bad? Depends on politics.

On the other hand, I grew up seeing my father investing all his earnings in education and arts. He always saw the individual before any nation, religion or race and he never affiliated to any political group. To me, my father is a bigger hero than my grandfather, who ironically is declared a hero, only because he died fighting in a battle during WWII. That's why when I heard about Ismajl's deeds, I thought the world should know about him, as he is the real HERO, because he conquered his deepest fears, only so that he can sooth the pain of grieving families. More so because he did this voluntarily 548 times during half a century.

TRIERA KASUMI BERISHA I was born in 1990, a start of a period of great existential hardship for my people and my family, in times of unparalleled political and economic uncertainty. The struggle for freedom from the Serbian regime and my father's work, as a scuba diver, shaped me personally and professionally. I am also a scuba diver and have helped him in searching missions in the past decade. When I was little, I was curious what kept him away from home from time to time and what it was that he did that made people give him so much affection. At the same time, he never seemed very happy as a person, but later in life I found out that he was very fulfilled in his heart and soul. His calling was to help people and his success in doing this is what makes him unique, which is a story I want to share with the world.

Croatia 2020. ANA HOLC is a psychiatrist and a founder of the Counselling Centre for Teenage Pregnancy and Mothers. Croatia is about to pass a law banning abortion, and the counselling centre is about to close. The City cuts grants, right-wing activists exert daily pressure, someone even physically threatens Ana. This reopens Ana's old wounds from years ago when she was a pregnant teenager.

Even though she's a great psychiatrist, she has a difficult time handling stress. Abandoned by her parents and boyfriend, disgraced and overwhelmed by guilt over her father's suicide, Ana stops believing in herself, and undermines her chances of a happy life with JADRAN, a man who really loves her.

At the beginning, her past life is a separate story, and only after merging these two stories can we make sense of Ana's present neurosis. Demons of the past resurface with her younger brother, a theologist manipulated by the right-wing group to damage Ana's public persona. They have a complex relationship even though they try to understand each other on a personal level.

Ana develops a special relationship with one of her wards, MARIJA, because she is a troubled teenager who needs to leave the shelter, as her baby is already one year old. Marija needs to get a grip on daily care for an infant, but she is immature and an alcoholic.

As the story develops, the pressure increases on the shelter, the Centre loses the city donations, Marija commits suicide, Ana gets sued for negligence and Jadran leaves her. Everything leads to collapse and the rebirth of a new Ana. Ana does not succeed in changing the outside world, but she succeeds in changing her inner world. She confronts her mother and she restore her faith in love through fostering Marija's child.

STORY DEVELOPMENT IN SEASON TWO:

A year later. Fužine. ANA lives in her mother's house with MIŠKO, MARIJA's child for whom ANA acts as a guardian. Ana was blamed for Marija's suicide in the first season and stripped of her medical license. Although she doesn't want to work illegally, people still come to her for advice. On top of that, she has to deal with Marija's mother. She's an alcoholic who was talked into taking legal action against Ana, and thus wants to prevent Miško from being fostered. JADRAN is back in Zagreb where he works as a social worker in an orphanage. He learns about Ana's situation and is eager to help her come back to Zagreb.

Ana has to face charges in court. MARKO, her priest brother, will testify for her, together with other clerics who will jump to her defense because they need her help in Fužine. Ana is caught in a difficult dilemma; although she wants to keep both her counseling center and her newly formed small family, she doesn't want to be blackmailed into working with conservatives.

CREATORS STATEMENT:

The idea for the series was conceived while making a documentary series about four pregnant teenagers. Since 2016, 5,237 girls aged 14-19 have given birth in Croatia. This subject is increasingly gaining in importance due to the spread of conservatism in Europe and America. Although the underlying theme is political, the series is primarily a complex and absorbing family drama. I want to show how hard-line views and a lack of communication break up families. The goal is not to preach or to take a stand for or against abortion, but to talk about consequences when there is no freedom of choice. The style is a mix of intimate style supported by powerful acting, and Nordic noir as seen in top Scandinavian TV series. Even though it is intended for families and prime time, the tone is serious.

VIKTORIJA is expecting her long-awaited adoption. She has spent years in the children's home - her mother is an addict who has never cared for her, and she doesn't even know who her dad is. Alas, one phone call in three months from her mom to the children's home is enough to keep her trapped in the system, without a chance for a real home. Viki is just starting an elite high school, where she ended by having excellent grades. She definitely doesn't fit in. She's used to being on her own, but her pent-up aggression gets her in trouble. Viki gets in a fight, being provoked by a girl named EVA, who quickly becomes her nemesis. Then, the school psychologist pairs her with a shy, sensitive boy named SVEN, thinking they would be a good influence on each other. They aren't thrilled about it at first, but when Viki defends him from the bullies in class, they become inseparable. MIHAEL, the boy who seems to be way too popular to be even seen with them, takes interest in Viki, so, joined together by the school project they become friends. Besides Eva, Viki has trouble in the children's home when some older kids, lead by PAVLE, gang up on her to take advantage. Furthermore, all of them are bothered by typical teen problems - struggling in school, love, bullying, self-confidence, class differences among students and such. Viki helps Sven with his anxiety, Mihael by tutoring him, and she's there for MINA a gay girl with family and love issues. And all of them, including Eva, get involved in a plan to rescue Viki from Pavle and the gang. There's also this newfound information which means she could maybe find her father, after all. At the school party, Mihael reveals his feelings for Viki and the secret that he's adopted. Viki and Sven decide to run away and search for her father.

STORY DEVELOPMENT IN SEASON TWO:

In season two, we see all the main characters back in school. Most of them haven't seen or heard from each other for the better part of summer break. VIKI seems sad, distant, and not willing to communicate with MI-HAEL, after they left things unfished. Through flashbacks, we see her and SVEN's journey of trying to find her dad, which was full of obstacles and unsuccessful. Sven and EVA get together and now she's even willing to openly show her other, kinder side of her for him. Mihael, trying to work things out with Viki and get her attention, openly admits he's adopted. His past mistakes, like using steroids, catch up to him and threaten his future. MINA lives with her father and two older brothers, and when she comes out to them, she gets kicked out. PAVLE was involved in drugs, but he gets free after ratting out the children's home counselor, so there's a change in the staff - not a welcome one for either Pavle or Viki. Viki eventually finds her dad, only to discover he has a family.

CREATORS STATEMENT:

DARIA KERŠIĆ

HOME is intended for teenagers. This kind of TV programme barely exists in the Balkan region, especially Croatia. It tackles problems such as – relationships, sexuality, mental health, bullying, pressure about the future, but also adoption issues, violence and anger management. The main arena is the school. The most important theme is – what does it mean to have a home? Is that limited only to our biological family? Or is it possible to create your own, different kind of home? Each of the main characters goes through certain family issues. Seemingly completely incompatible, they share much more than meets the eye. There would be 4 seasons, one for each high school class. A significant integration of social networks is planned, especially the additional content between the episodes.

CREATORS' BIOGRAPHY

DARIA KERŠIĆ was born in 1990. She has a master's degree in Business Economics, and is currently at the MA Screenwriting programme at the Academy of dramatic art (Zagreb). CineLink Drama

SABRE is a Political Thriller series based on real events in Serbia, 15 years ago. After the failed assassination of the Prime Minister on the State highway, it looks as if nothing has happened, at least in the eyes of the public. We find DANICA (33) a young reporter on the rise, in the midst of one of her broadcasts, managing to get information using unconventional and radical methods. NIKOLA (45), a crime police inspector, finds out that the truck driver who blocked the Prime Minister's way on the highway is a known criminal. The trucker is not arrested due to seemingly late police reaction and the criminal clan immediately starts to prepare for the next assassination attempt. DAVOR (20), a loyal and rather unexposed clan member is given the task of driving the shooter. The Prime Minister is shot down by a sniper and the country plunges into chaos. The Provisional Government imposes a state of emergency and on a press conference announces that free reporting is forbidden and all information must come from them. When Danica realizes that no one wants to write about the true story behind the assassination, she starts her own investigation.

The Government launches operation Sabre, during which a number of clan members are being arrested or shot by the police. The clan members, unprepared for this operation and in panic, seek a way to flee the country. Davor tries to settle with the police, when he finds himself involved in kidnapping and brutally killing a cooperating witness. He realizes that he's got nowhere to run. When Danica finds out that people deep inside the state apparatus are connected with the Prime Minister's assassination, she puts her and the lives of her loved ones in danger. She is provided with police protection and forced to live in total isolation, estranged from her family. Realizing she cannot goback, Danica decides to pursue her investigation to the very end.

STORY DEVELOPMENT IN SEASON TWO:

A year after the trial for murder of the Prime Minister, the country seems to be stable again. Serbia has yet to extradite two of the most wanted war criminals to the Hague tribunal. One night two young soldiers are found dead in a Military unit in the middle of Belgrade. The death is proclaimed as a suicide, while the traces suggest a much bigger cover up connected to the hiding of one of the wanted criminals. DANICA our investigator will pursue this case in an attempt to bring justice and discover the web behind the conspiracies. Based on real events that have not yet been uncovered.

CREATORS STATEMENT: GORAN STANKOVIĆ, VLADIMIR TAGIĆ

The assassination of Zoran Đinđić is probably the most important political event in modern Serbian history. We still live the consequences of this act that marked shutting down a possible road for this society and we will never know where that road could have lead us. This is a story about a death of one man, but also a story about a system that doesn't allow itself to change, a system that eats itself, becoming its own cancer. In this system, anyone who tries to change something becomes a threat. At the beginning of our story the Prime Minister is the target and by the end of it, the Reporter trying to solve his murder becomes a target herself. Both of them are ready to pursue their quest to the end, regardless of the consequences and this causes their suffering, turning them into tragic heroes. Our wish is to show the world we live in without polishing and genre stylization, without mythologizing or glorification, instead show it as harsh, rough and raw. During her guest, Danica (the Reporter) loses two most valuable things, her freedom and her family. Nikola (the Inspector) realizes that the system he devoted his entire life to is the opposite of what he fought for, and Davor (the Criminal) lost all illusions about the glorified criminal life and is now trapped in hell he cannot get out of. All of them are torn between the need to do something good and the world around them that doesn't let them do it. The series is imagined as a fast-paced thriller, where the suspense is ever present, but never taking us away from the complex characters we are portraying. They are always the central part of the story and we always experience the reality through their eyes. In order to achieve the raw and realistic approach to the topic, the camera will be controlled but with an almost documentaristic feel. Although very planned out and blocked, the camera movement will appear very organic and spontaneous. We will not be using any visually stylized elements in the approach, to always remind the viewers how close to real events the story actually is. In order to point out the cyclic nature of the eternally repeating events in our society, we decided to go back and explore the turning point in our recent history, that had profound effect on our lives. This series is our contribution to making sure the truth is not forgotten and that fighting for it in this world still has meaning.

The mountain village of Rotten has profited off of snow and the resulting winter sports for many years. Now the snow refuses to come, and the village loses its focus. On the glacier a body emerges from the melting snow. Who is this woman in 1980s clothes who apparently died a violent death up in the mountains?

LUCIA SALINGER (38), the new doctor, has just moved to the village with her husband and children in an attempt to rescue their marriage. She has to examine the body and soon becomes drawn into the case against her will - especially when she realizes that her little daughter ALMA (8) has a mysterious affinity to AURELIA (95), an old woman from the village. When the girl suddenly vanishes Lucia resolves to get to the bottom of the mysteries that have been kept under lock and key in the village for decades. SNOW lives from its strong atmosphere and its characters surrounded by nature. It looks like the classical mystery thriller on the surface (with whodunit elements), but later deals with dysfunctional families, who represent our whole society.

And there is the political issue, the changes to our society because of climate change still without any consequences in our lives, still denying the problem and the critical situation of earth, we are living in. A story about suppressed secrets, lost people, forgotten deeds, about the snow that no longer comes and about people who finally stop running away from the past.

SNOW tells the story of a village, which has drowned its secrets in snow and darkness. When the secrets meet the surface, they have to be dealt with – in one way or the other. The person to dig up those secrets is a foreigner, a woman who came here to and peace but what she sees is that she has to handle certain topics in order to really and out what's going in underneath the surface. We need to confront our fears in order to be able to heal. We need to know the truth, even if it hurts.

STORY DEVELOPMENT IN SEASON TWO:

Several weeks have passed since the horrific avalanche hit Rotten and the residents are busy rebuilding their properties. Several people have been found dead and MATTHIAS (38) is seriously injured. LUCIA tries to take as good care of him as possible while he is in the hospital as well as at home, no matter how exhausted she feels. But their marital problems are far from being over. Among the people found in the snow is an elder man who calls himself THEO UNGER (70) and although no one remembers him, he insists that he lived in Rotten the whole time. His home is a small hut in the forest that nobody has ever noticed before, but people are busy with putting their lives back together and don't have time to think about him too much.

The HOFER's try to come to terms with their family tragedy and the bankruptcy of the hotel. In order to survive financially they rent some of the empty guest rooms to a refugee family from Afghanistan, - the first non-Europeans to ever live in Rotten. Although the new inhabitants try their best, many people are suspicious of them. Especially because they seem so eager to assimilate and just be like them and also because they connect to the nature surrounding Rotten better, than the village people themselves. (They for example make tea out of herbs, collect berries and start bee keeping).

The Afghan family seems to get along with Theo very well, which makes them even more suspicious to the rest of the village. IRMGARD HOFER (72) doesn't care about what the others say and connects especially with ASMAAN (40) the mother of the family who has also lost a daughter before. BERNHARD (46) comes back from his travels and Lucia realizes that she still has feelings for him. She decides to move in with him and wants to take the kids with her which leads to further problems with Matthias. Alma and the other children become friends with the kids from the Afghan Family and spend many hours outside, where one day, deep in the woods, they find a buried chest with gold and jewelry in it. Theo tells everyone it belongs to him but soon a woman arrives in the village and claims it for herself. Two days later she is found dead in the river. New questions arise: Who was this woman? Who killed her? What is Theo hiding about his past? Why is the Afghan family so close to him? But it seems like not everyone in the village is eager to find answers. And then on one fateful day Lucia gets her blood results back from her yearly health check and finds out that she suffers from leukemia. Suddenly she has to question what she really wants from life and also where to find a cure and what exactly it is, that she has to cure first.

CREATORS STATEMENT: MICHAELA TASCHEK

Life in the mountains, in harmony with nature, has always interested me. When the ski regions around the place where I grew up began to close due to lack of snow, and more and more villages lost not only their source of income but also one of the most significant elements in defining their identity, I began to research the psychological dependency between snow and human beings. It was at this point that the idea for this story first struck me. I elaborated a number of questions: What will people do in future without snow? Why are people so devastated when the snow doesn't come? Why isn't this something that we can prepare for better? And then I extended them to analogies about family secrets which, although everyone knows they will come to the surface at some point, are repressed for years or even decades... until it's too late. Finally, I resolved to weave these two aspects together and not only have the snow fail to appear but also have dark secrets buried underneath it come to the surface as a result of its disappearance.

Alongside the Alps, archaeology is one of my major interests, and I soon established that my ideas weren't so far-fetched. In fact, glacier archaeology is growing in importance every year; alongside ancient artefacts, more and more bodies are emerging from the glaciers, many of them recent enough to still have living relatives. In the Swiss Alps alone it is expected that bodies of dozens of missing people will be found by the year 2025. During a holiday which took me right across South Tyrol I came to the conclusion that this landscape would be the appropriate location for my story. I invented the village of Rotten, where these related problems of lack of snow and climatic warming are becoming acute, and the villagers have become expert over the generations at sweeping things under the carpet... or rather, under the snow. The Hofer family in particular, where virtually everybody is carrying a secret around. Soon it became obvious that there had to be people coming into the village from outside, whose arrival – in conjunction with the lack of snow makes the whole issue more urgent. Outsiders who take us, as an external audience, into the village with them, so we can explore the place together with them. However, the way of life in this mountain village must not be completely alien to these new arrivals, and they have to come to the conclusion that they can't continue to run away from the ghosts of their past. In this case, the newcomers are the Salinger family, especially the mother Lucia, who is a doctor. A family hoping to make a new beginning in Rotten; they would very much like to leave their past failings behind them in the big city but, just like everyone else, they are forced to see that not everything can be relegated to the past so easily.

As a TV child of the 1990s I have of course, thanks to X Files and similar shows, a particular weakness for the supernatural. And a childhood in the Alps without growing up alongside the local myths and legends would be unthinkable for me. From the very beginning an important point in the development of the story was the mystique of the mountains, the overpowering force of nature which, no matter how hard we try to subjugate it, we are always dependent on. So why only speak about spirits – why not let them actually return to the village? Why not have the past, which has been repressed for so long, become part of the present? This was how I came to the motif of the revenant (ALMA), which also features in so many Alpine legends. That is how SNOW came into being.

A story about suppressed secrets, lost people, forgotten deeds, about the snow that no longer comes and about people who finally stop running away from the past. Glacier, chamois, spirits. Snow, guilt, sleepless nights. All that and much more confronts us in Rotten over the 6 45-minute episodes of our stay, while the people there are forced to confront their secrets – and not all of them will escape with their lives.

2020 Kiev. BABYLAND is the first and most successful surrogacy clinic in the West. The heart and brains behind it is NA-TASHA, a woman who comes from violence, hate and murder so has dedicated herself to life, love and optimism. She has perfected the art of hiding her past by atoning for it. Natasha helps young women find their feet or get back up on them. She helps infertile couples start a family, to have the baby they feel they can't live without. To those who don't understand, who protest her work in ignorance and fear, she will listen but sometimes people just want to destroy what threatens them. A bomb goes off in BABYLAND. Natasha now has to defeat the haters and protect her world, her ideal, the meaning of life she has constructed for herself. BABYLAND: Rules get broken, laws get broken. The young Ukranian surrogates are all there for the money: some to change their lives, some to save their lives. Couples from around the world come to find the perfect "vessel" for their baby and Natasha will satisfy them. But at what cost? Some will have their dream come true, others not. Babyland will come under attack, not only by a bomb, but by the exploitation that always surrounds the business of a woman's body. A young woman hangs herself, a Priest believes he must destroy Babyland, an old dear friend is murdered, a lover betrays and is betrayed, a dark secret that won't stay buried is exposed. Natasha is at the center of all this. External and internal forces compel her to face her demons and that means walking away from her life, her love and begin the journey to find her missing daughter. A journey that starts when she turns the key in the lock of Babyland for the last time, leaving it behind. But can she really leave her world behind?

CREATOR'S STATEMENT:

The human race still believes it's immortal and we immortalize ourselves through our children. We don't want A baby, we want OUR baby. And not only, if we can't or won't have our own, we want our baby to be carried by beautiful, tall, blond, blue eyed women. Ukraine is the only place in the European continent where surrogacy is legal and cheap. Couples come from all over the world in the quest for their perfect baby. Ours is an urban contemporary tale that tackles these issues: what makes a parent? Who do babies "belong" to? What do surrogacy and genetic manipulation all mean to the future of Europe? The world? The human race? Lofty questions. No answers here, just stories taken from real life that describe but don't judge and leave the viewer rooting for life actually.

STORY DEVELOPMENT IN SEASON TWO:

Natasha has walked away from Babyland. She has lost her only friend, her love and now her world. Before dying, a priest gave her one clue that will lead her through Season II. Her journey will take her to her past, old wounds will be opened. Will her daughter, 15 years old, be able to understand why she was abandoned or will she make Natasha pay an even higher price? The Russian mafia has Babyland in its clutches. Run by Irina, an ex surrogate and protege' of Natasha, Babyland has entered the world of prostitution, illegal egg and sperm banks, baby and human trafficking. Season II will tackle these huge issues. At the core, what happens when business takes control of a woman's reproductive process? And how can women get that power back?

Across four one-hour episodes, CONVICTIONS tell JO LANGER's remarkable survival story.

In many ways, her story is a somewhat unconventional ménage à trois between Jo, OSCAR and Oscar's other love: the communist party's ideology. Oscar obsessively refracts all his actions through this ideological prism. This clearly has severe implications for Jo, Oscar, their marriage and their two daughters.

Oscar's fierce political devotion enthralls Jo, at first. She turns her back on a conventional bourgeoisie life and chooses Oscar. They flee Europe together as the Second World War crashes down on their families. As Jews, they are lucky to escape. Oscar elects to return to Czechoslovakia after the war. But instead of building a socialist utopia, a nightmare ensnares them. Oscar is arrested, due to his Jewish roots, amidst an obscure internal party purge. The consequences of his failure to adjust to the reality of life under communism, rather than its theoretical tenets lead directly to his torture, staged confession, show trial, and a long prison sentence.

Jo's fall from grace is also sudden and brutal. Fired. Evicted. No communication with her husband of 20 years. Jo fights prejudice and danger on all sides; she manages to save her family through unbelievable feats of resourcefulness and resilience. She survives in the face of a regime intent on destroying not only their lives but their very identities. She escapes and testifies – this is her story.

CREATOR'S STATEMENT:

TEREZA NVOTOVA

I belong to the millennial generation. We were born into a free world. We don't know how it feels to live behind closed borders. Fear doesn't drive our every decision. We can't imagine loss of identity or freedom. And that's why we often fall into the same traps that destroyed millions of our ancestors' lives. A significant number of young people across the Europe are drawn to far-right or anti-establishment parties. In Slovakia – where Jo and Oscar Langer were persecuted largely due to their Jewish roots - the majority of first-time voters support a politician who denies the Holocaust. I believe that Jo Langer's life demonstrates that radical solutions often lead to the greatest human catastrophes. However, Jo didn't write her memoir to preach and we aren't adapting them to preach either. Jo never tells us what to think. She's not a superhero about to save the world. Nor is she a meekly suffering martyr. Just like most of us, she lives the best she can. But unlike us, she lived in a world where noble ideals have led to hellish consequences. While civil society quietly tolerates authoritarian tyranny, where Jo and her family have lost their right to a normal life. Jo tells her story with poise, surprising humour in the face of misery, and emotional depth. She is a modern, freethinking woman – someone with whom I can easily identify. And it is because of her voice - the intimate story of a woman trying to survive hell – and the voices of all the daughters, sisters, and wives who lived through this period that I am inspired to tell this story. Men have told most of the stories from the totalitarian era. Recounting a patriarchal time, through a patriarchal lens. The female consciousness brings with it new layers – an unbelievably resilient softness that refuses to harden and crack in the face of terror. I want to tell this story, which is both old and new at the same time. It is the story of a woman who would not lose her face or heart. The millennial generation is fascinated by dystopian narratives. They imagine universes set in razed, smoking futures, controlled by a big brother to maintain the illusion of a perfect society. Citizens are under constant surveillance. Individualism is dead. But this is not the concocted reality of a fictional future. This has already happened. By recounting one woman's experience, we might show how easily it could all happen again.

CREATORS STATEMENT:

JUDIT BANHAZI, CYRIL TYSZ

Who needs Dystopias? We are already living in one. We are past that point of denying it. We are in dire, radical need for change. Yet more and more we are stuck in a circle, a doomed pattern, repeating traumas of past decades or centuries over and over again, annihilating our future, as if past, present and future did not even exist... as if it was all part of a cursed repetitive flux. Is change possible? And if so... where does it lead us? Can we truly evolve through confronting unresolved traumas of the past? If change was possible, would we want to stay part of our shitty comfort zone, or would we care to take the red pill and confront our Abyss? Is our fear of the future actually killing in the egg what we're paradoxically craving for: the ability to evolve?

THE BORDER constantly shifts between the idea of how and to what extent change is possible (or impossible). It's a crude search to what makes us human and if it's possible to transcend our past traumas and evolve from what we are.

THE HITCHHIKER is intertwining deep psychological conversations with the hazardous world of hitchhiking. It is a psycho drama about a girl who had a traumatic childhood and messed up family. She is a pianist and a wannabe composer student. She likes to live a dangerous life, she paraglides and after paragliding she hitchhikes to get home or at least to the nearest station.

Once she has an accident by landing and she suffers concussion. She celebrates that she survived and gets some drinks with painkiller pills. On the way home while hitchhiking she gets sick and gets raped semi-conscious by a driver. She is brought to the hospital. The trauma affects her concentration when it comes to playing the piano. While she doesn't remember what happened to her, police close investigation. She tries to recall her faded memories with the help of a criminal psychologist of the local police department. She criminal psychologist of the local police department. She goes back paragliding and hitchhiking to the same spot regularly to remember and find the rapist.

Can she finally find the perpetrator without getting into more trouble, or can she overcome the trauma, start composing again and live a less dangerous life without taking revenge?

The heroin's story is full of empathy, built up around the hitchhiking carpool situations with deep conversations about (everyday) psychological distresses.

STORY DEVELOPMENT IN SEASON TWO:

As a result of hypnotherapy and paragliding at the same spot regularly PANNA remembers more and more details of the traumatic evening. At the end of season one, Panna breaks up with her boyfriend and starts an affair with her ex paragliding instructor. At the last episode it turns out to the viewer that he was the one who raped her.

In season two, the perpetrator burns down the hospital's laboratory to get rid of the DNA sample and succeeds to throw suspicion on the criminal psychologist who treated Panna with hypnotherapy without a proper license and helped her remembering the trauma. The criminal psychologist continues the investigation with the help of Panna's best friend and ex-boyfriend under a pre-trial detention.

Finally, they manage to catch the perpetrator. Panna opens up to her mother and they get back together with her ex-boyfriend. She finds the way back to playing the piano and gets accepted to the Music Academy.

CREATOR'S STATEMENT: MARCELL PÁTKAI

Our personality is formed by our life experience. It's all about our past perceptions and the way of interpretations. In our accelerated world we often hide our feelings and thoughts not only from others but from ourselves

too. We don't really have time for in-depth conversations or self-reflection. I also used to hitchhike many times. I was always surprised that the drivers felt much more comfortable to open up in front of me, a stranger than in front of a friend or a family member. The most interesting insight of the Hitchhiker TV series is the deep psychology that made the In treatment TV series successful worldwide. The heroine enters the drivers' private space, their car and spontaneously they open their mind for themselves.

ELENA and MIA, both in their mid-thirties, have been best friends since university. They are now both journalists at a local TV station but lead very different personal lives: Elena is married and ready to take a step back from her career to start a family, while MIA hates all things conventional and remains a free-spirit and driven career-woman whose relationships never last longer than a month and whose main goal is to be promoted to anchor. Elena discovers that she has fertility issues and will have to undergo IVF, while Mia falls pregnant accidentally. Both women end up in completely different places than they had planned and are forced to learn from each other that life isn't always what you expected. This is LIFE UNEX-PECTED.

STORY DEVELOPMENT IN SEASON TWO:

The second season would continue with ELENA and GEORGE discovering their last IVF attempt failed, adjusting to life without kids and exploring other options like adoption, and MIA taking on the challenge of being a single mother, as well as being caught in an awkward love triangle between the baby's father and MONTY, her cameraman.

STELANA KLIRIS, TONIA MISHIALI

I always imagined myself having a family, and after trying to conceive for a year, my husband and I finally did fertility tests and discovered that we both had issues in that department and our best bet at falling pregnant would be IVF. We started straight away and we had no idea what we were in for – the tests, the injections, the family interference, the expense, the home remedies, the break-downs... did I mention the injections? It turned out to be a difficult, emotional and ultimately ridiculous experience, without any result, other than the inspiration for a comedy series. LIFE UNEXPECTED is not only about fertility and pregnancy, but about life expectations and what are you willing to sacrifice or change when life throws you a curveball.

SASHA, a 20-year-old Serbian streetwise girl, decides to go to Berlin and get her missing father back to her family in Belgrade.

Meanwhile, MARLENE, a mid-30 romantic sociopath is living a Berlin life. Even though she is dating and exchanging various men and women in the dark loneliness of techno clubs, she still longs for love and true connection. Once in Berlin, Sasha finds a clue about the identity of the mysterious German woman, called Marlene, her father married to get papers. She looks her up and befriends her without Marlene knowing who Sasha really is. From the moment their paths cross, Sasha is trying to be present in Marlene's life, as some sort of an unwanted guardian angel. Marlene tries to get rid of her, seeing Sasha as a random invader of her life's routine. As time is passing by, to surprise for both of them, they get close and protective of each other while Sasha's secret is ticking as a bomb threatening to ruin their friendship.

STORY DEVELOPMENT IN SEASON TWO:

In Season 2, ZLATKO's character becomes a more prominent character next to SASHA and MARLENE. The main plot revolves around Sasha's and Marlene's search for Zlatko, their messy meeting and the consequences Zlatko has on Sasha's and Marlene's friendship.

CREATOR'S STATEMENT:

MICHAELA PNACEKOVA, MARIJANA VERHOEF Playgirl is a 'galmance', a story of an unusual friendship and struggles of the two single and childless women who are clashing with their own idea of independence as they are desperately looking for intimacy in a city where nothing ever lasts but parties and one night stands.

The series questions what other ways of life one can have apart from the traditional one: get settled, have kids, buy a house, work and die. The idea is to portray the two main characters not as warriors but rather as slaves of their own habits and fallen hedonists avoiding their responsibilities of tomorrow.

The dramaturgy is linear, the dialogues are saucy and blunt and the main engine of the story is the ever-changing relationship between the two characters and their confusion with what they think they want and need.

CREATORS' BIOGRAPHY

MICHAELA PŇAČEKOVÁ (born 1981 in Slovakia) is a Berlin based interactive creator, writer and producer. She studied theatre and wrote plays for several years. THE WILLOWS are immortal beings who look just like regular people but spend their days indulging in mind numbing decadence. They prey off of human suffering, sucking in people's souls, all while trapped in the city of Prague. Their existence full of excess has left them in an eternal trance - until HYNEK, a poor student, comes along and snaps them out of it. After his sudden death at his own wedding and an unexpected twist of fate, Hynek rises from the dead and transforms into an immortal Willow. The Willows must try and keep his resurrection a secret, though things quickly get out of hand. When Hynek's young bride ANEZKA finds out that her husband has miraculously returned from the grave, she refuses to let the love of her life disappear again!

STORY DEVELOPMENT IN SEASON TWO:

In the second season (as in all the possible following seasons), we will concentrate on telling the story of one of the Willows we met during the initial season. For this particular one, KLARA, the marsh fairy, comes into focus, as we follow her throughout the centuries she has to live through trapped in a body of a 13-year-old girl. The life of the eternal teenager brings innumerable obstacles she has to overcome - ranging from attending middle school forever in order to prevent the unwanted attention of social services, changing places of residence to distract prying neighbours, as well as not being able to fulfil her love interest in the fellow Willow - the water goblin RICHARD who simply cannot come to terms with the fact that he could be in a relationship with a child (even if the child is 384 years old). We will dig into history, to find out how Klara even became one of the Willows and which of the emotional conditions were met in her particular case. On top of that, Klara will now have to help her sister (which she pretends to be in the non-Willow world) LILI on her quest to find a new Destroyer, one that could finally end the existence of Willows. Unless, of course, Klara manages to persuade Lili that there are, in the end, some perks that come with being alive forever. We will also touch upon the threat that the Prague governing office presents to the Willows and delve deeper into the secret society itself, examining further how is its existence intertwined with the human one.

CREATOR'S STATEMENT: JAN TĚŠITEL, MILADA TĚŠITELOVÁ

I am fascinated by the idea of existence of beings that are unrecognizable from us mortals, beings who live in Prague for centuries and have experienced all the events of this intriguing city. They have seen its inhabitants grow up and pass away, they watched as its winding streets were torn down and altered. I am intrigued by the storyline of the main heroine who is a firm believer in romantic love that overcomes all obstacles and is willing to fight for it. But how can this naive girl face the cynical and experienced Willows?! The contrasts of this story are what I regard as its greatest strength: the eternal lazy beings who no longer remember how to live properly come face to face with mortals who are still willing to listen to fairytales. The fateful clashes with the banal, the grandiosity with the smallness and the history with the current times. The mysterious atmosphere of Prague is confronted with the ridiculous tourist attractions and all blurs into one.

CREATORS' BIOGRAPHY

JAN TĚŠITEL is a graduate of Prague's FAMU directing department. During his studies, he shot a short film PEOPLE INVOLVED, which was nominated for the Best Student film at the Czech Lion awards (2010). His first feature film DAVID (2015) premiered in the Forum of Independents competition at Karlovy Vary film festival and also competed in Montreal. He is currently in development stage of his second feature film PLAGUE (written by Milada Těšitelová), produced by Sirena Films. He also works as a director on numerous programs for Czech television, as well as a commercial director.

MILADA TĚŠITELOVÁ graduated from Prague's FAMU screenwriting department. Two of her scripts are currently being adapted into feature films: "Mountains in the Mist" (dir. Agnieszka Smoczynska) and "Plague" (dir. Jan Těšitel). Milada had two of her writing works released: the story of "Plague" was adapted into a comic book that was published in 2015 by Lipnik publishing house and a year later, "Cats and other stories about fear", a book of short stories was published by Argo publishing. She is currently working as a scriptwriter and dramaturgist at Czech Television.

I'm keen to share my experience and work with European writers and companies. I believe that constructive feedback is a key factor to improve the scripts. Also, in the development stage, it is important for the writers to feel the support as opposed to being instructed what to do. I'm looking forward to reading engaging stories, meeting compelling characters, and helping the writers to find their distinctive voices.
